

Hello all,

I have a wee garden update and would love to hear about yours as well!

My garlic is growing very well - nice big stalks coming out of the ground. Scapes to come will provide photographic evidence at that time.

My rhubarb is beautiful and I've harvested quite a lot of it already. I'm attaching pictures of the 6 cups of rhubarb that I boiled with 1.5 cups of both water and sugar to make a simple syrup. Who knew that rhubarb that looks like vile green mush would turn out such a beautiful syrup? So far the syrup has been enjoyed in a margarita (me) and to add flavour to a glass of water (Mason). The 'sludge' (affectionately) can be used on toast...haven't tried that yet....

What do you have growing in your garden? What are you excited about watching grow?

I give thanks to God for good soil, roots that strengthen, green shoots that grow towards the light and the miracles growing deep in the soil. May you be like the shoots that grow and/or like the bulbs growing deep in the earth. May we all be fertile soil for the Word.

I hope you have a fantastic rest of the day!

Blessings,
Jenni
